The present application fulfils the requirements of Art 33 PCT. A method for mixing a solution comprising hydroxyl ammonium and phosphate with a solution comprising nitric acid is claimed. The concentrations of hydroxyl ammonium, phosphate and total acid and the temperature should be within the limits given by the equation in claim 1. In the thus obtained solution the decomposition of hydroxyl ammonium is reduced or prevented. The hydroxyl ammonium is then used in the production of cyclohexanone oxime.

Prior art:

WO 01 94296 A and WO 01 94298 A disclose the production of cyclohexanone oxime using hydroxyl ammonium. The equation for avoiding decomposition of hydroxyl ammonium in solutions comprising hydroxyl ammonium, phosphate and nitric acid is not given and no examples are given for mixing solutions according to claim 1 of the present application. The problem of avoiding decomposition of hydroxyl ammonium in solutions comprising hydroxyl ammonium, phosphate and nitric acid is not discussed. GB-A-1 138 750 disclose production of oximes using hydroxyl ammonium salts. Mixing as claimed in the present application is not disclosed. The problem of avoiding decomposition of hydroxyl ammonium in solutions comprising hydroxyl ammonium, phosphate and nitric acid is not discussed.

These improvements could not have been predicted and justify inventivity.
